

Have a look at these two poems

- 'Windsong' by Judith Nicholls
- 'I Am the Rain' by Grace Nichols.

1. Can you identify a line in each poem that shows the use of the first person?
2. What have these writers chosen to personify?
How do you know?
3. Which poem is your favourite? Why?

Today we are going to write our own weather-related poems, using these as inspiration.

Think back to what we did yesterday. How did we personify the sun and the snow?

How could we continue this?

I am the sun...

Don't forget to look back at the examples poems for help!

WALT use personification and first person within a poem

Your task today is to use what we have discussed, and the spider diagrams you created yesterday, to write your own weather-related poem about the sun or the snow.

Remember, we are looking to write the poem in first person and use personification within it too.

You might like to use the phrase 'I am the sun/ snow' to start your poem.
